BRAND

INTRODUCTION

Madeleine Multi-Wear (MMW) is a sustainable women's fashion label focusing on transformable garments to minimise consumers' overconsumption of clothing. MMW establishment is to shift each piece between multiple silhouettes - long sleeve to singlet, maxi skirt to mini, dress to top! Reducing the need for various pieces. MMW aims to reshape wardrobes through versatile design, responsible materials, and ethical production. We target young women aged 18-25 who want affordable luxury-style flexibility without overconsumption.

The home page has introduced MMW instantly and identified the environment with a green colour scheme. The headline and tagline of “One garment, endless styles.” Image sets the vibe for MMW and establishes how this brand is focused on conscious consumption.

The About section provides a brief overview of MMW, including its values and purpose. Reassuring consumers about what their information is and educating them.

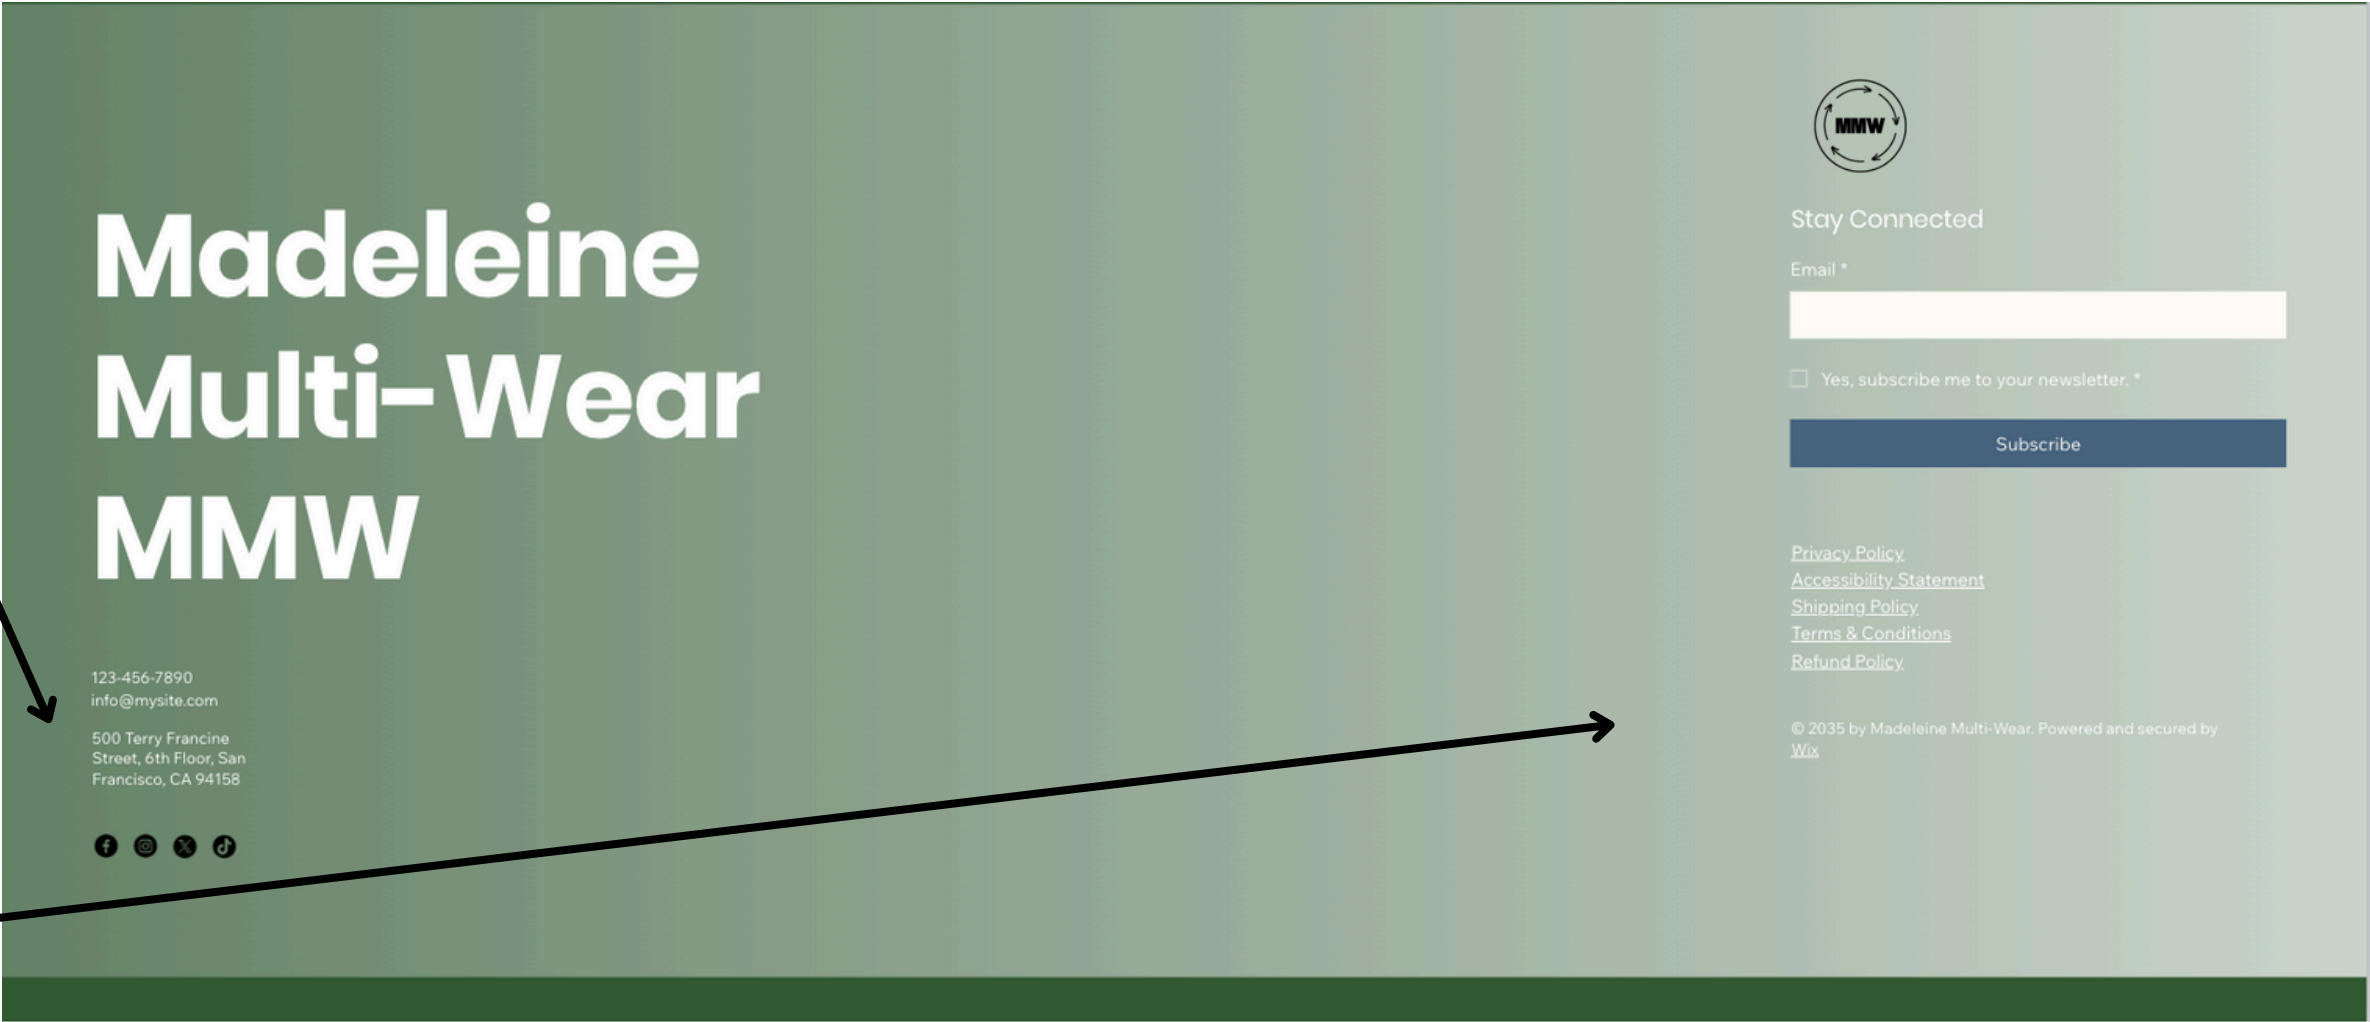

I have added a top pick so consumers can get a sneak peek of the collection and understand what they're being invited into.

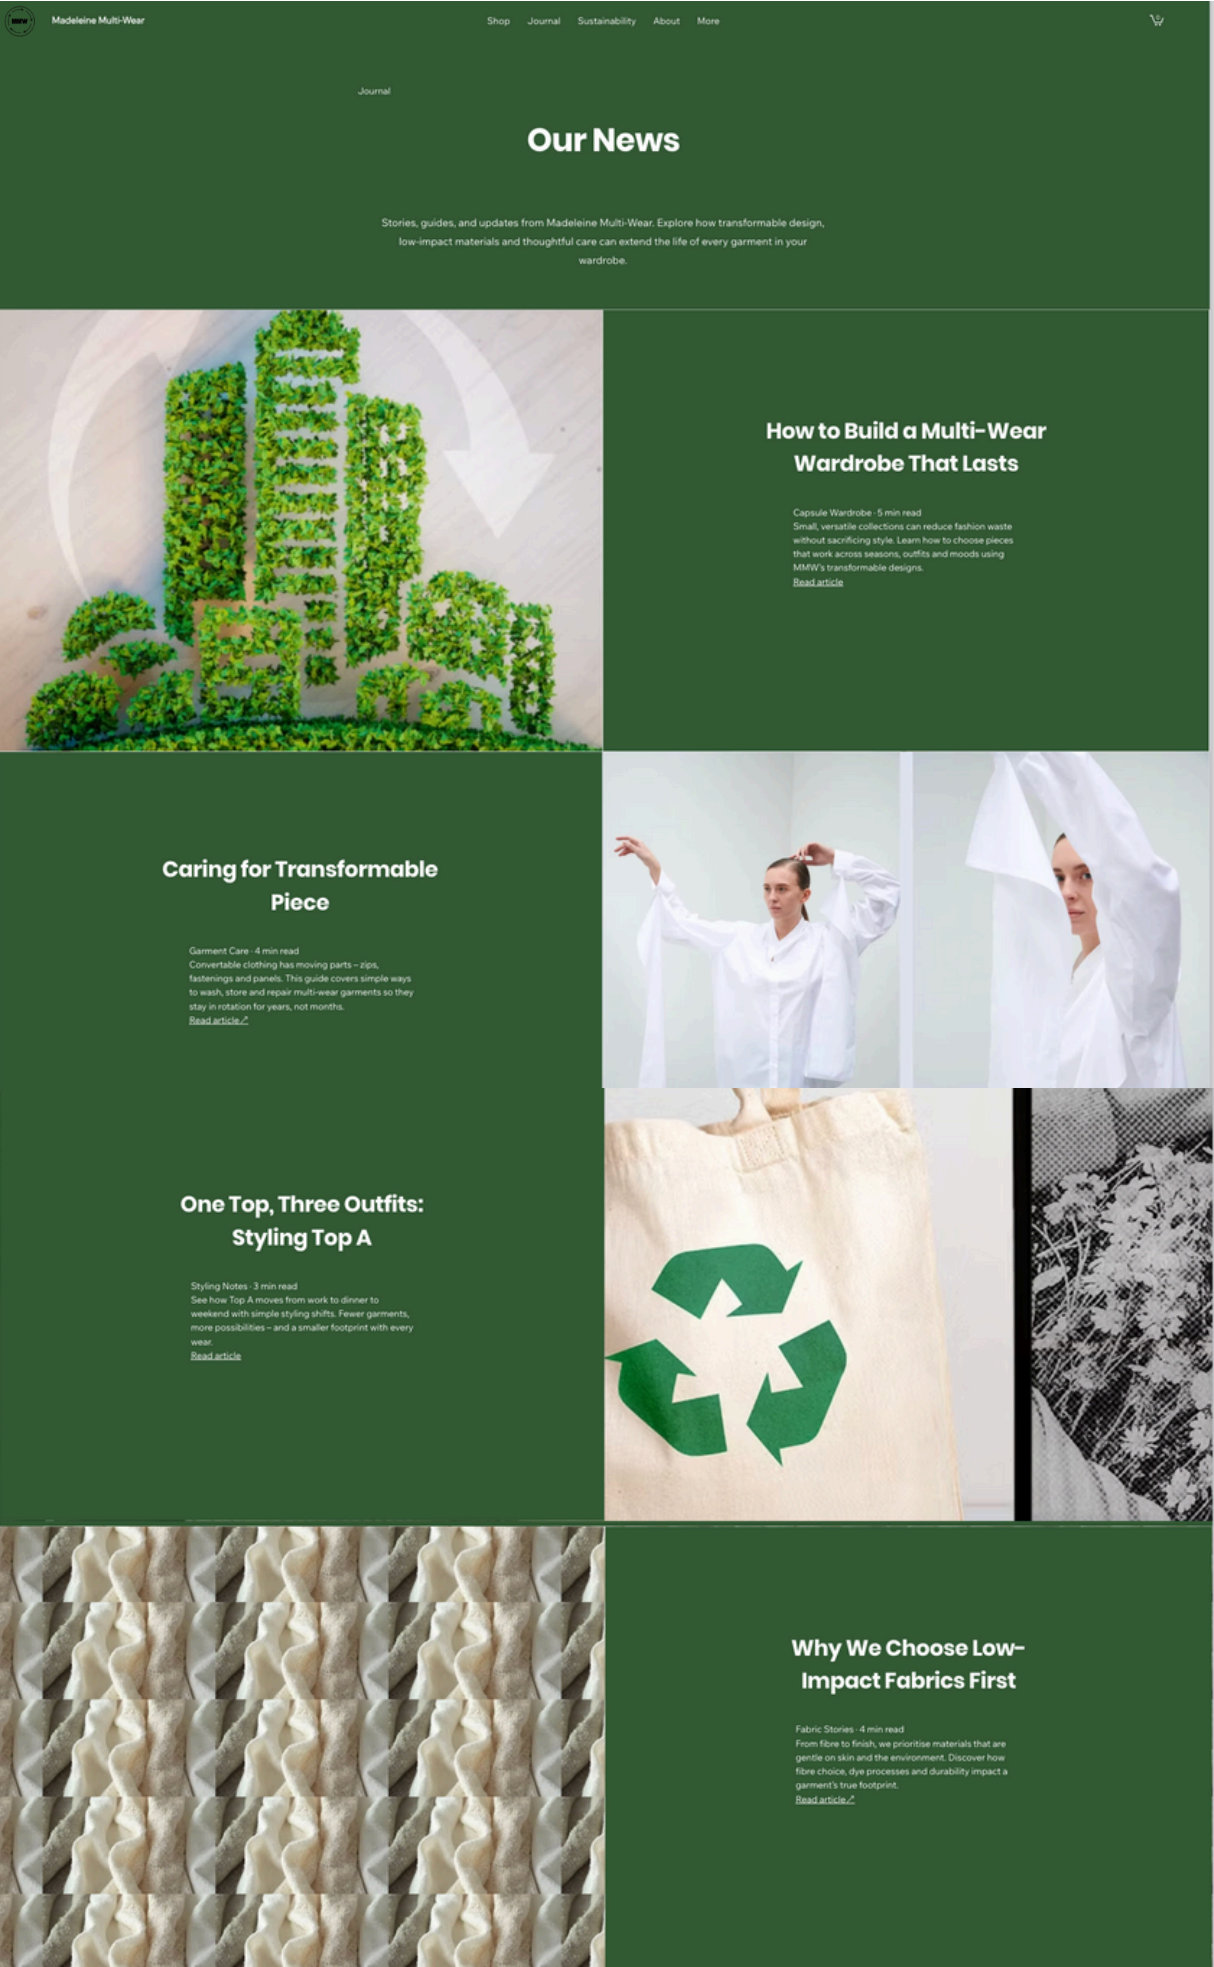

The footer intro reinforces the brand name and identity and helps the centre navigate to small elements consumers may need, which will also be on every page.

Footer

MMW and contact area navigation for consumers to find essential info and contact details, including social media links

Newsletter and policies are also on this footer showing connection and transparency to keep consumers updated and understand returns and shipping for an easy understanding to purchase

The purpose of the journal is to give the brand an easy way to navigate, tell its story, and help consumers understand clearly through visuals, fonts, and links, demonstrating MMW transparency.

Journal Page

This is also a User Experience design, as the grid shows easy-to-browse topics and short descriptions that make it approachable and supportive, helping everyone feel included.

About page

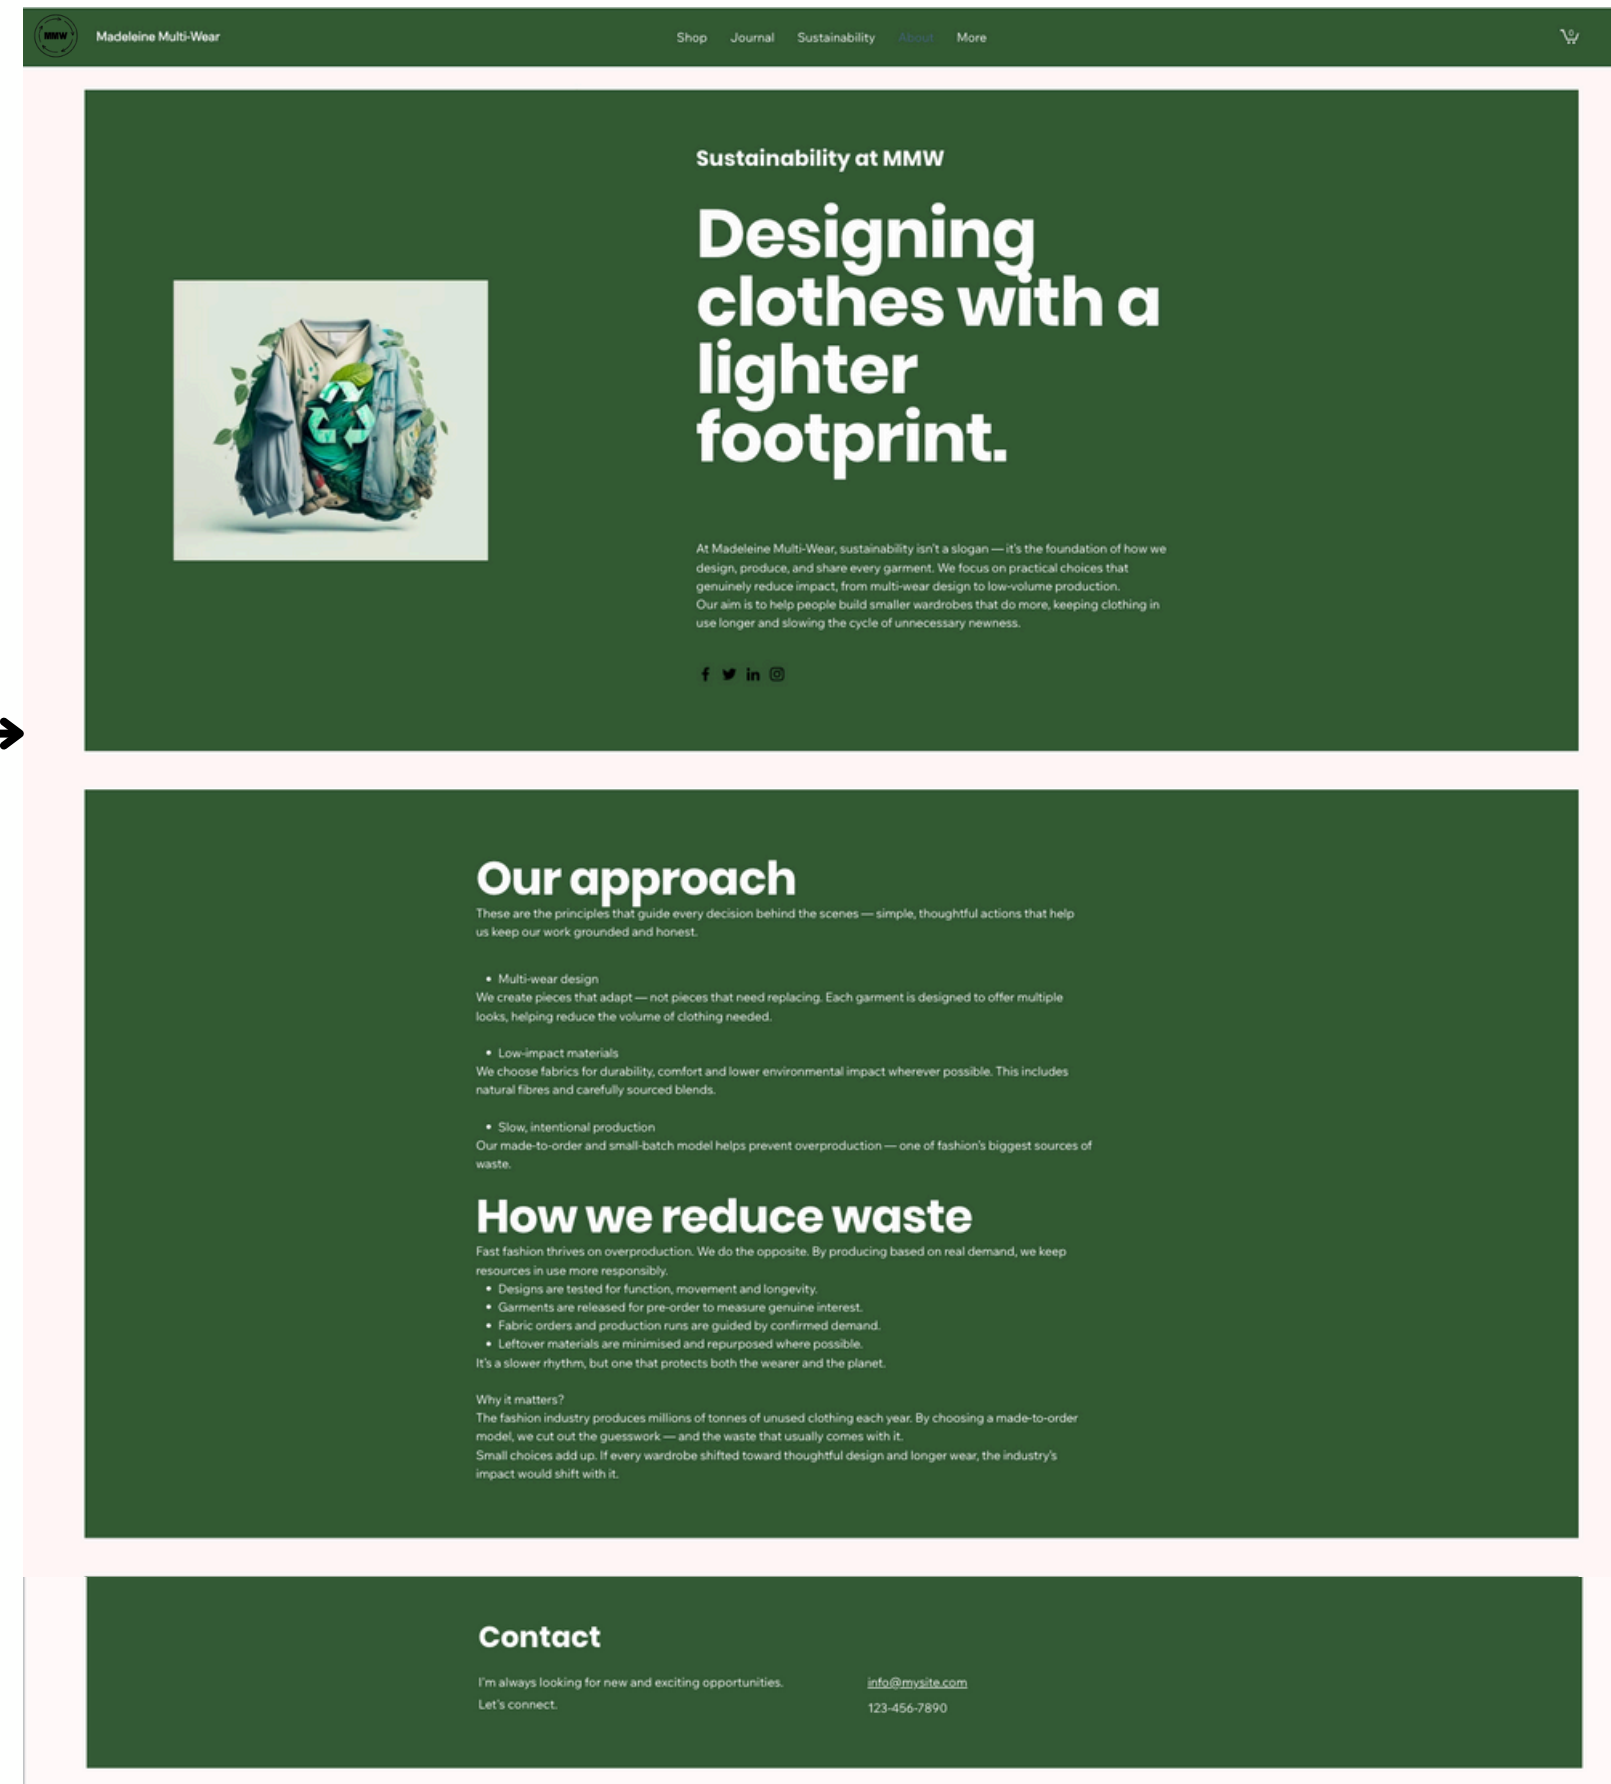

The purpose of the about page is to tell the whole story of MMW and provide the why, how, what, who, and sustainability information, too—introducing the consumer and keeping the consumer.

The user experience is driven by the layout choice, with the three columns making the "about us" reasoning equal, and the imagery reinforces the sustainable idea and why users should collaborate with MMW.

Sustainability Page

The sustainability page clarifies the beliefs and values that underpin MMW. Setting an approach and proving how consumers can be environmentally friendly through a multi-wear garment purchase from MMW.

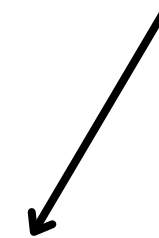

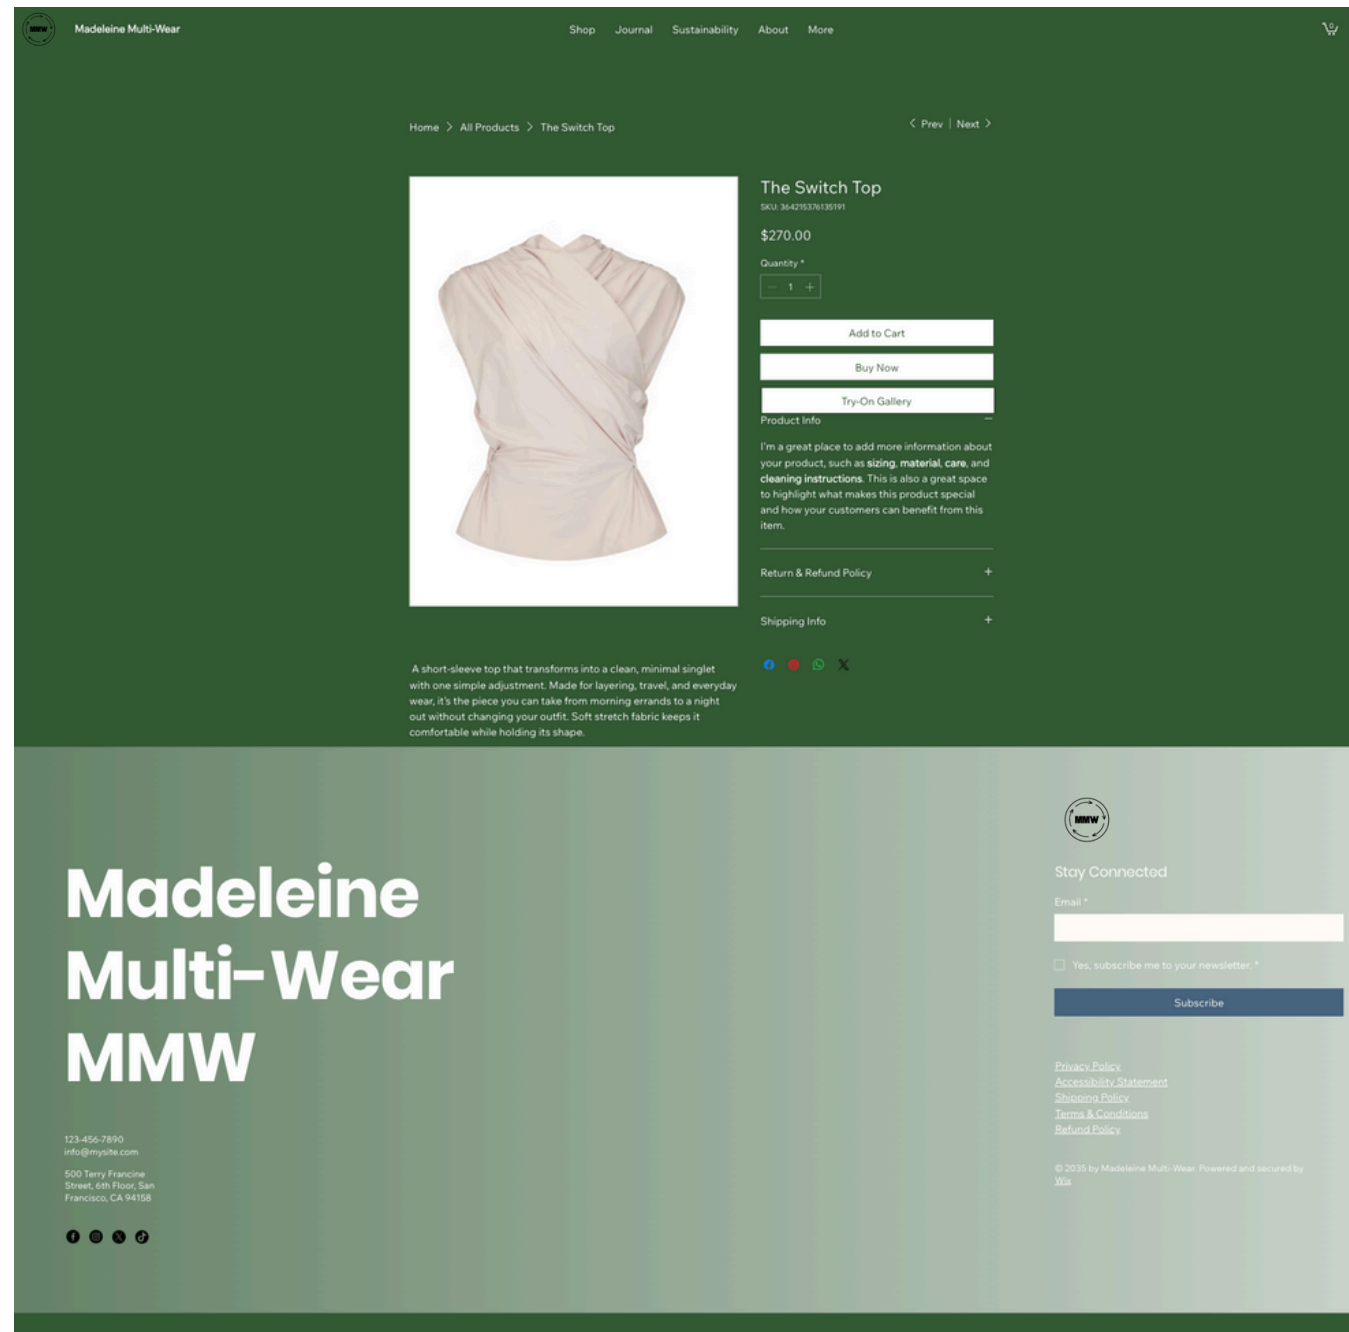

The user experience, navigation, and layout are structured to present the message quickly and clearly. The green and recyclable image promotes the identification colour palette and sustainable brand.

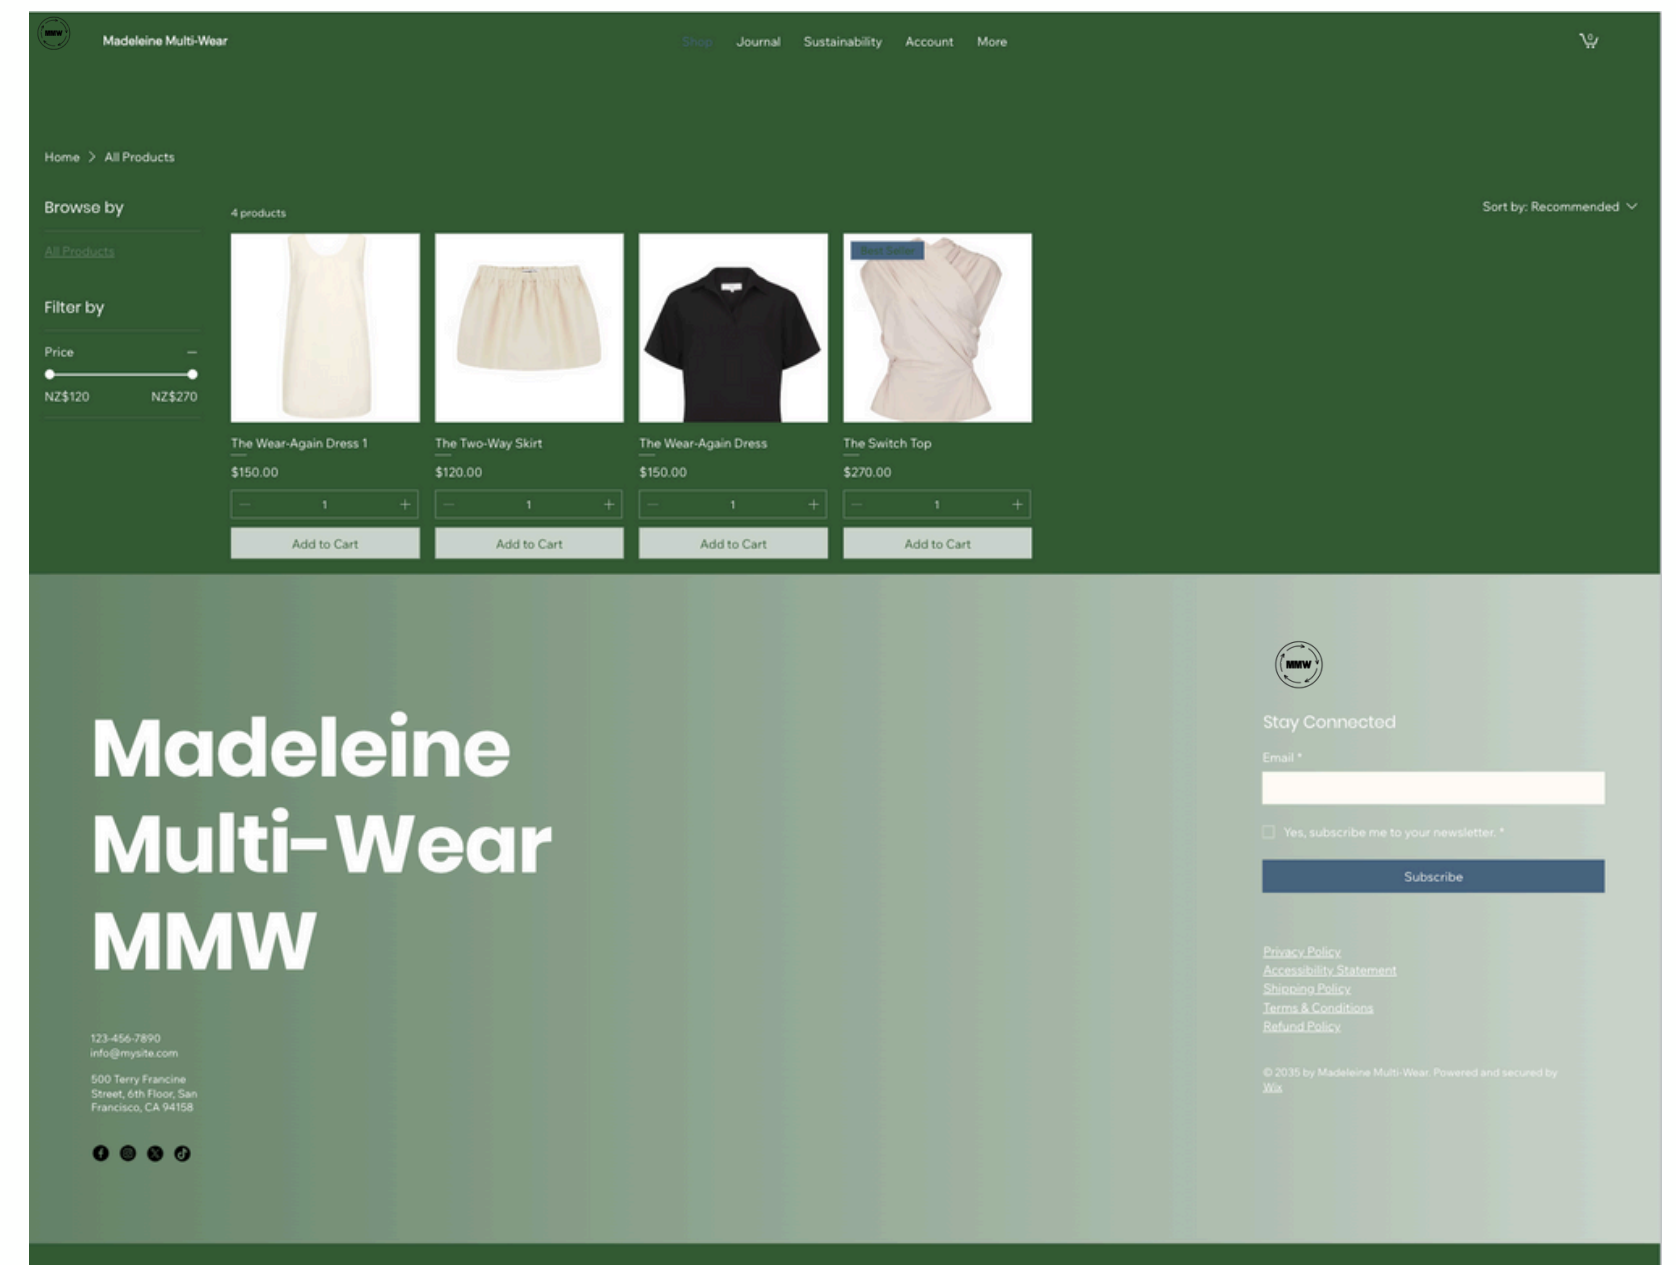

Product Page

The product page is designed to keep the garment the primary focus and keep it uncluttered, providing a supportive environment for purchase decision-making with price, sizing, key product information, and sustainability information. Making the layout easy to scan, giving a smooth UX that clarifies the shopping experience.

Around the image, we include descriptions of the brand, the product, and sustainability, highlighting key info so the user doesn't need to look it up on another page. The policies and transparency are clearly highlighted as well. The Try-On Gallery button conveys added value and confidence to consumers before purchase, while the Buy Now button conveys fast, efficient UX.

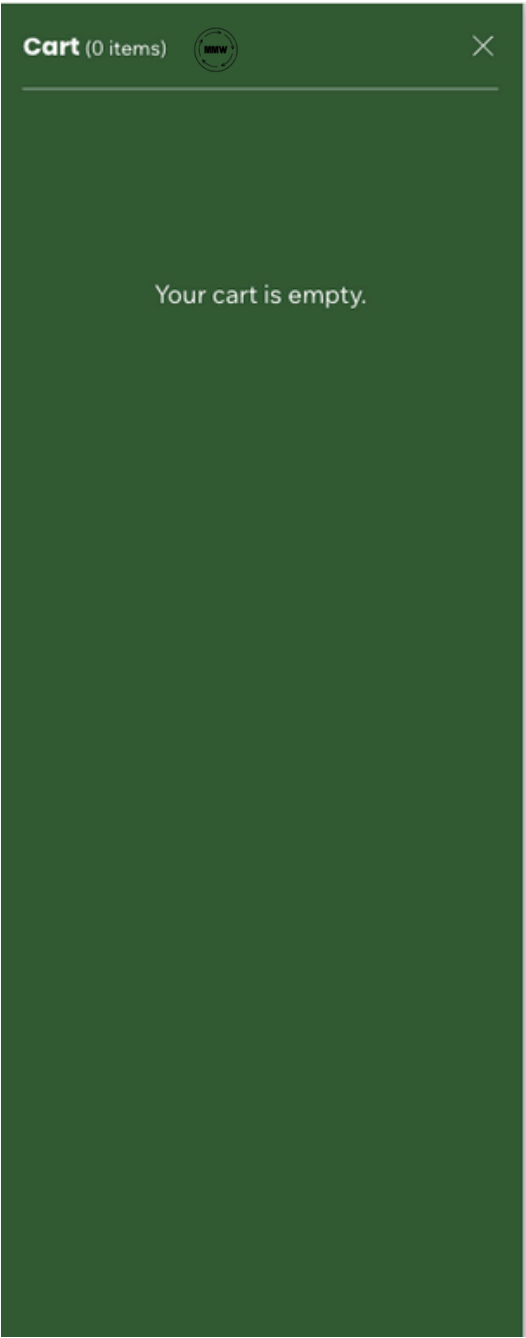

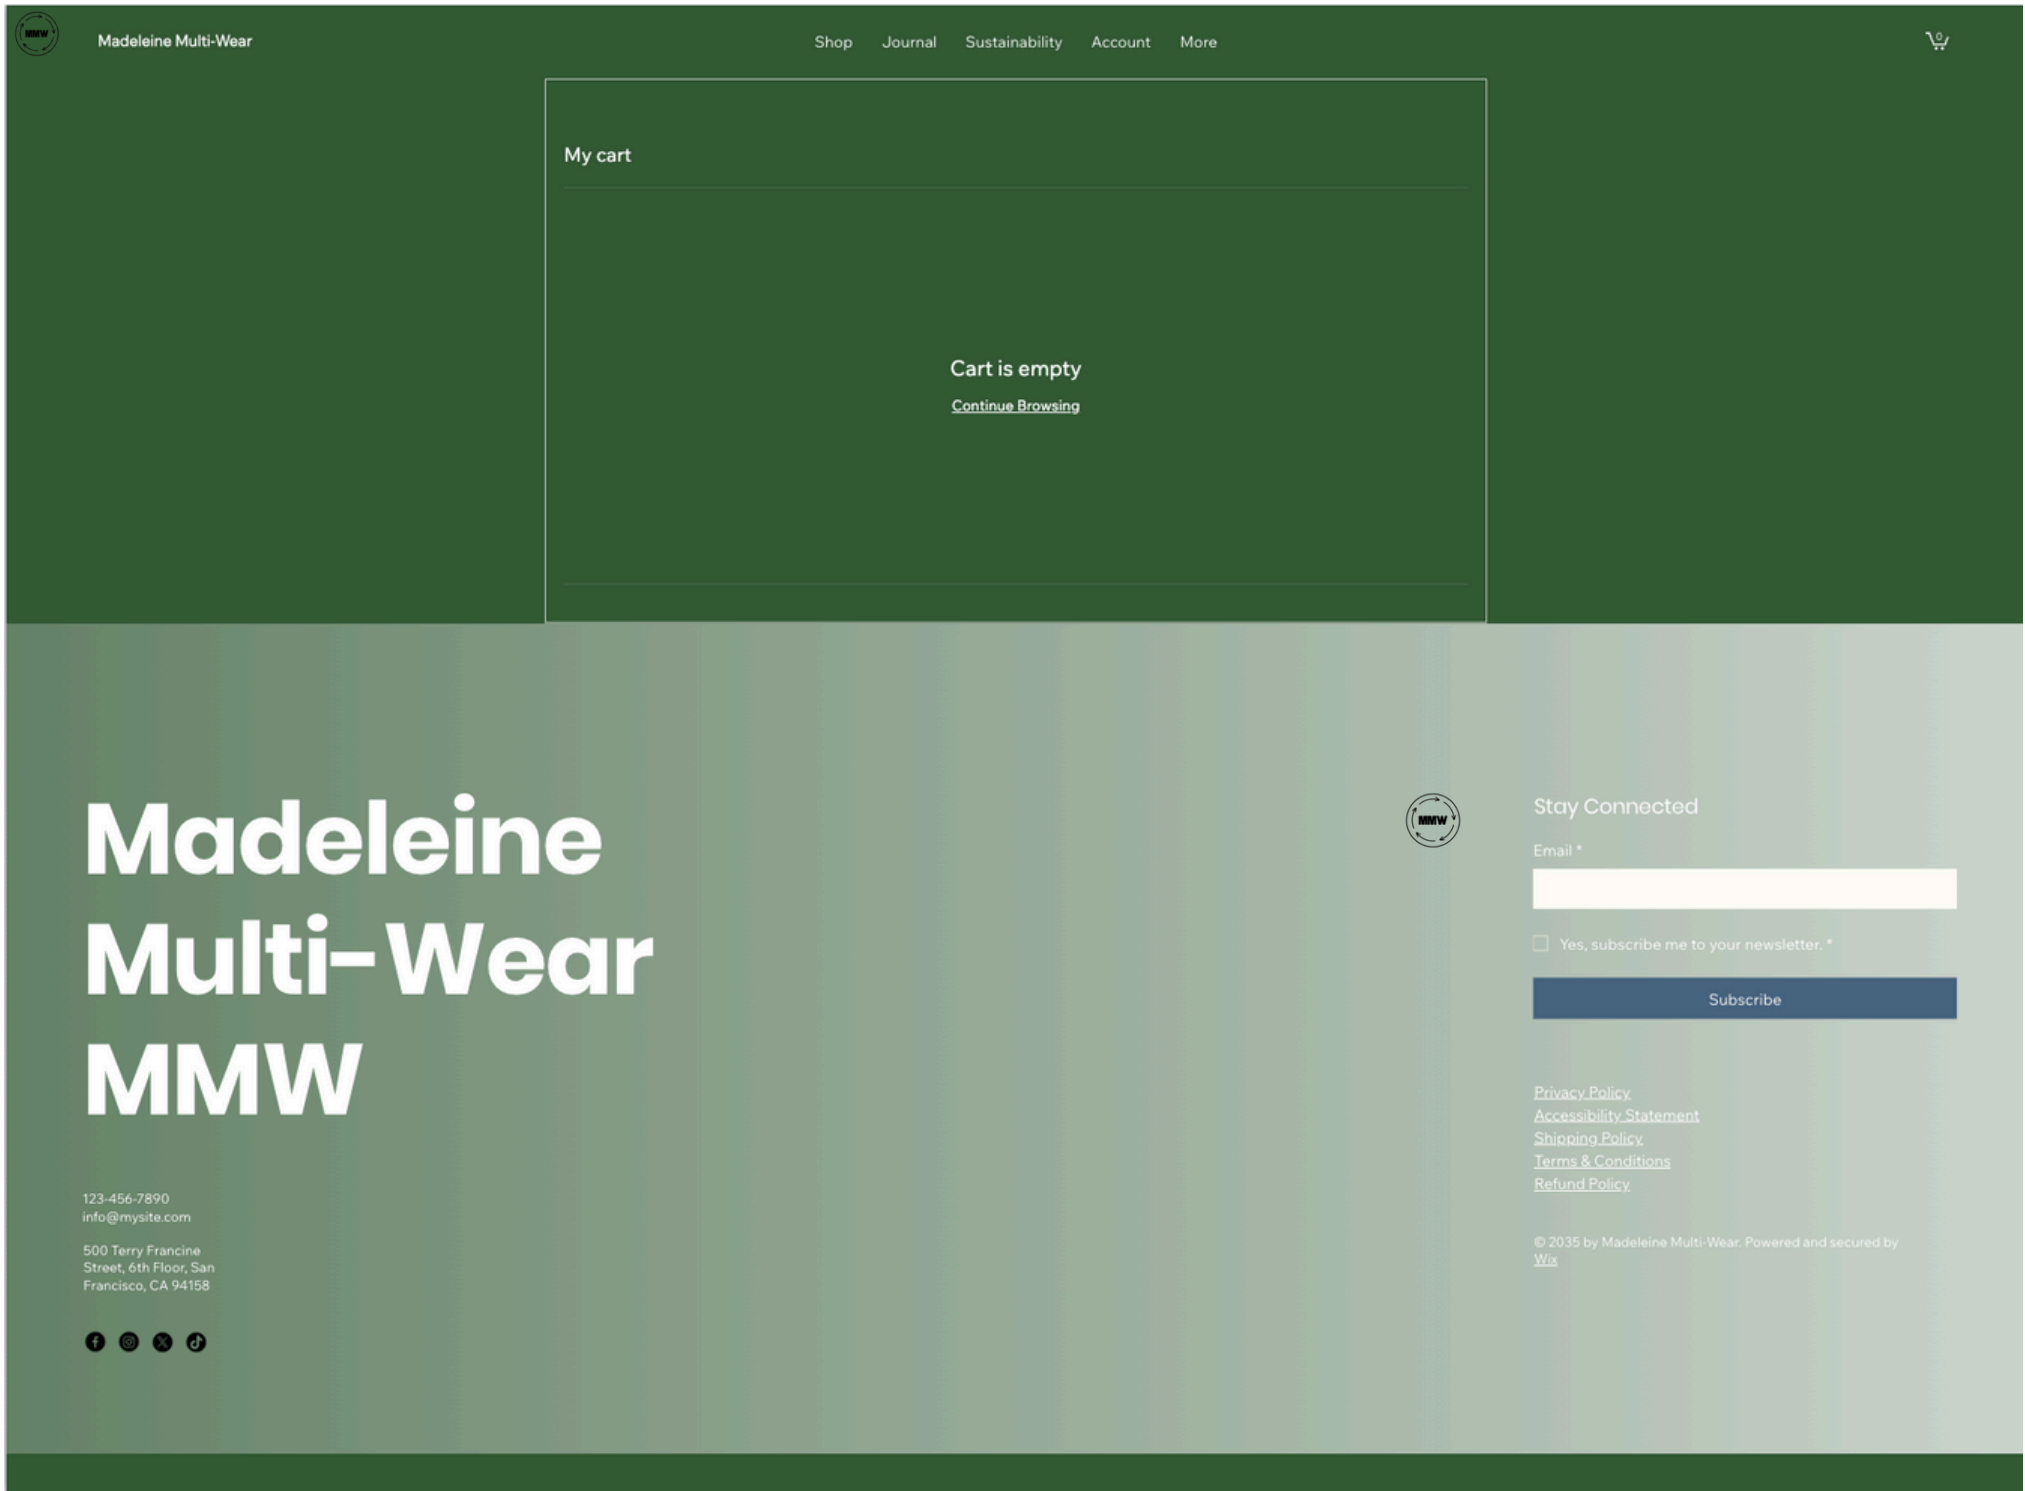

The category overview defines a complete collection and layout grid of 4 flat-lay images, and you must go to the Try-On Gallery to view pictures of the model. The browsing experience is clear and straightforward, with UX and brand identification in the footer. And helps consumer navigate their purchase decisions.

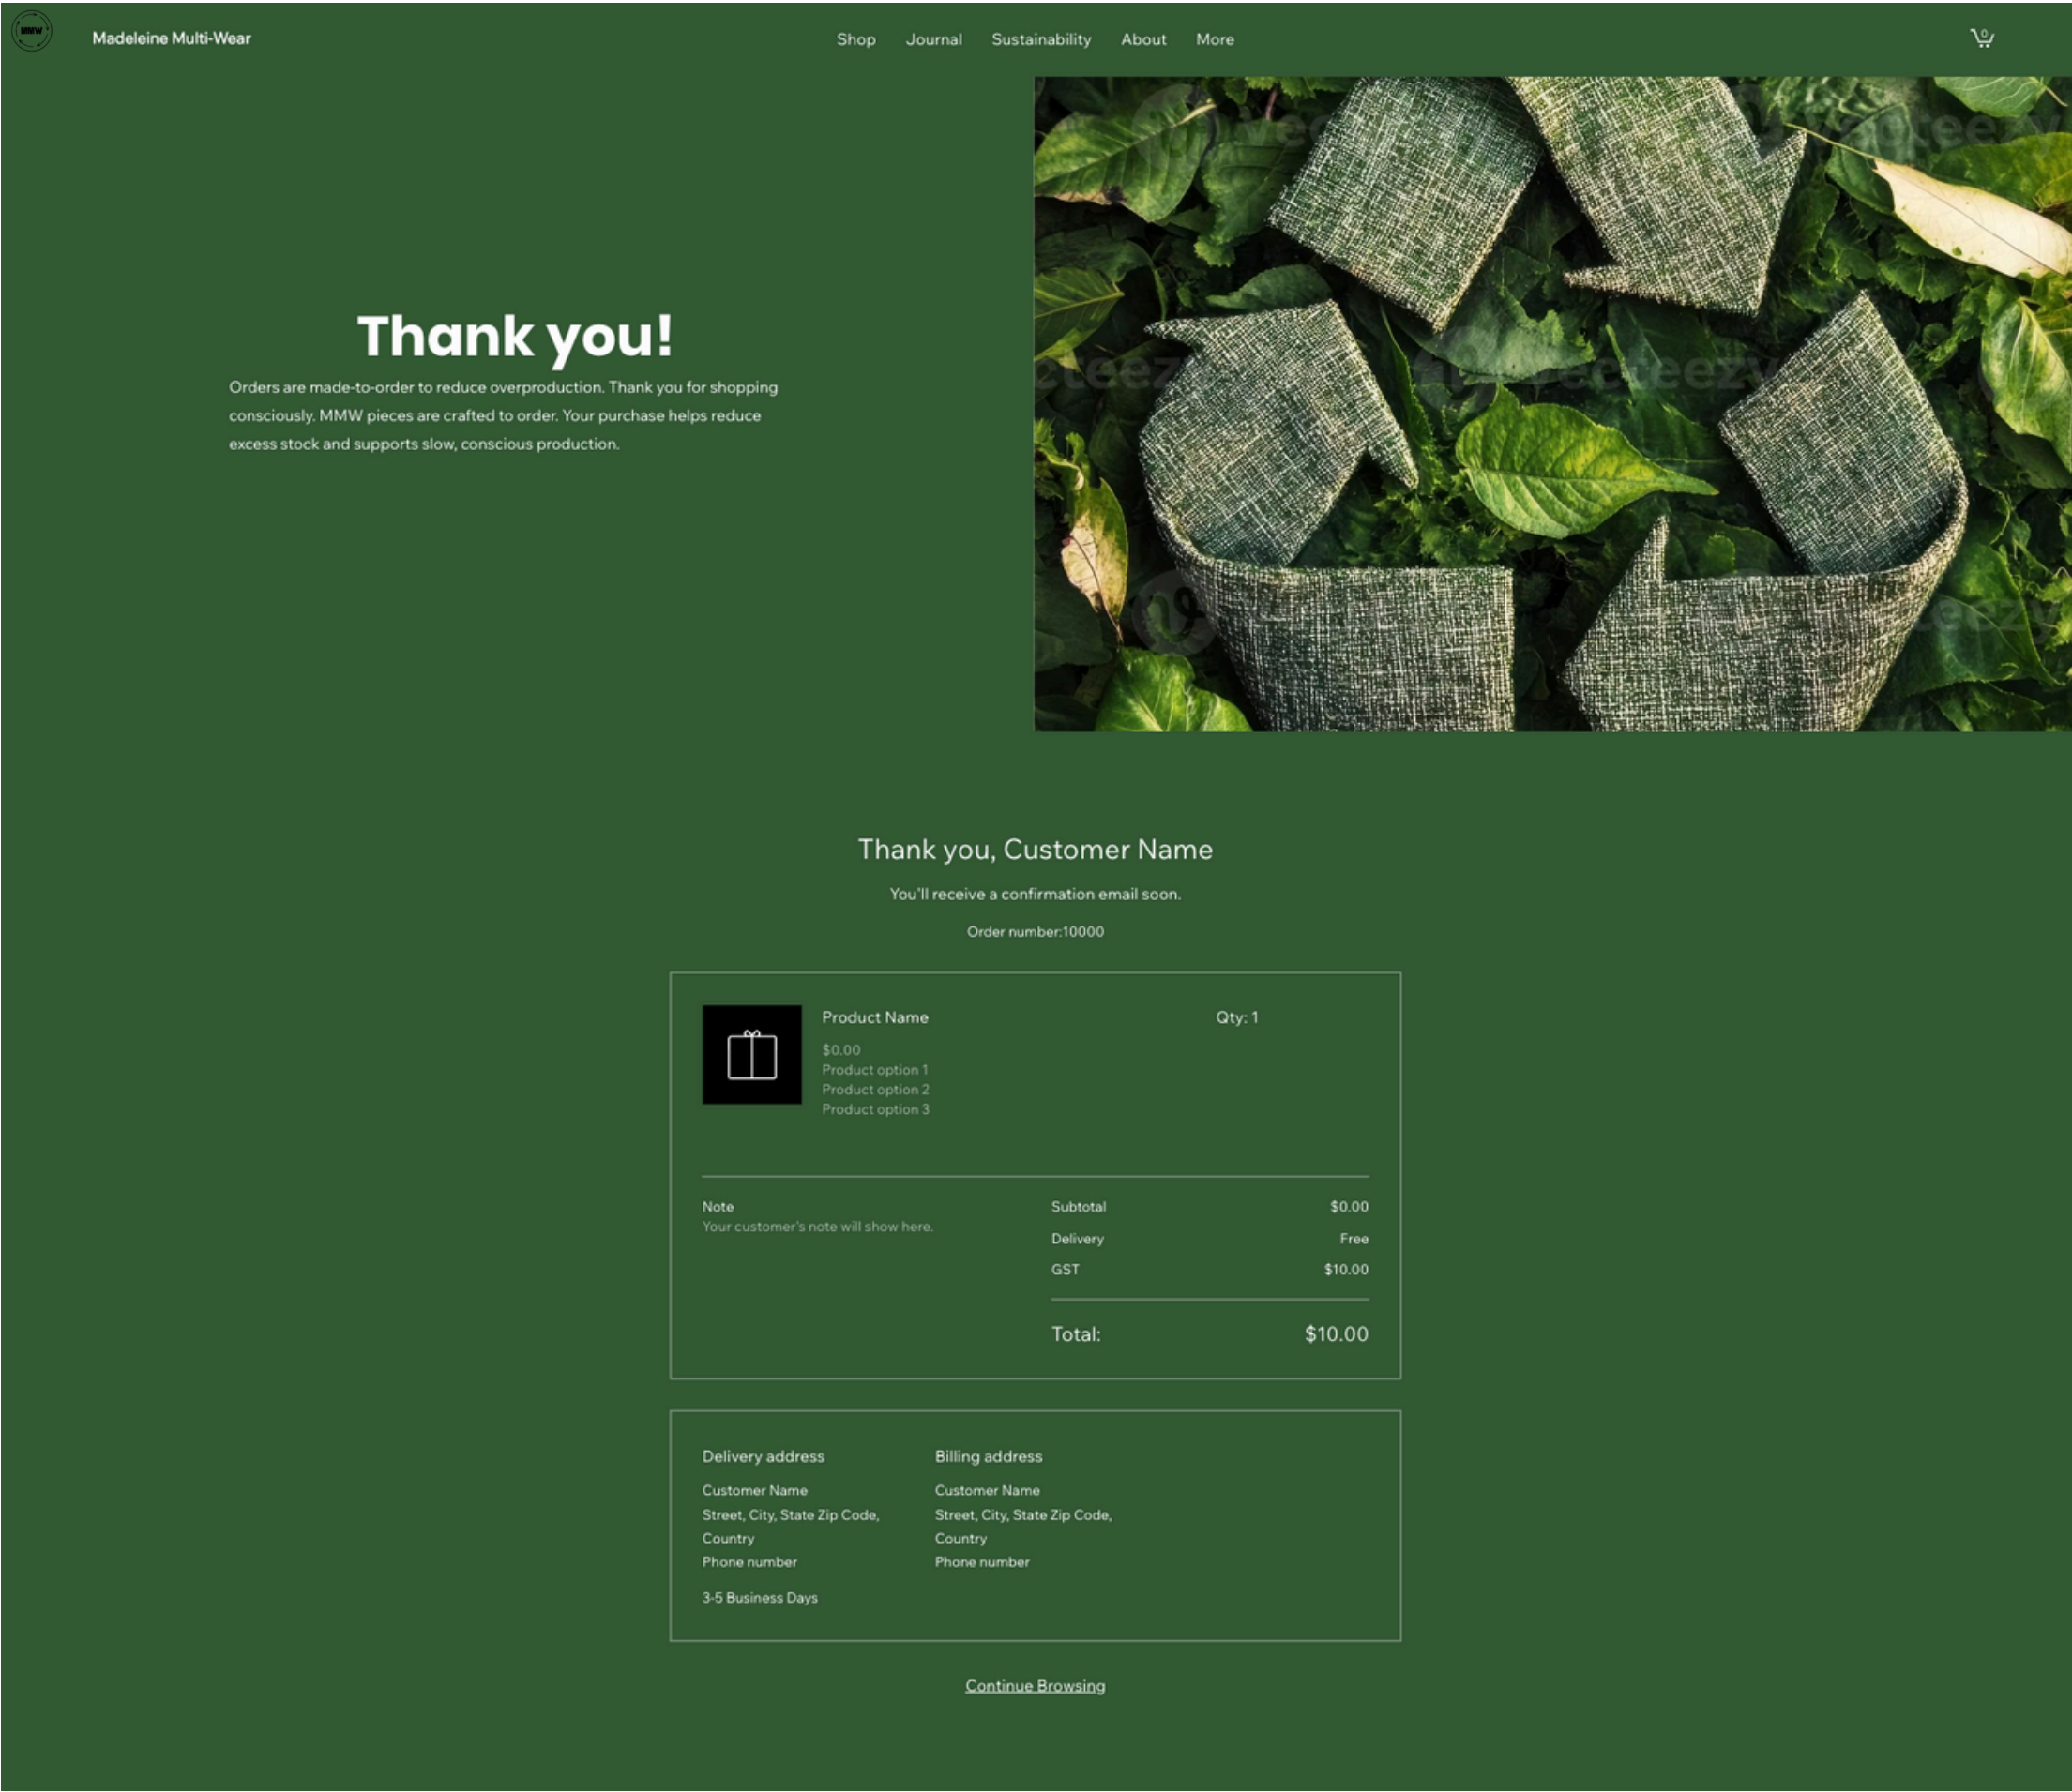

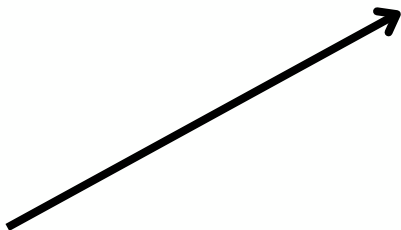

Checkout Page

The checkout page is simple, with no distractions, helping users focus on their purchase and how to navigate it. The side cart is the same, simple and effective, but it helps customers browse their products while also browsing more catalogues.

Thank you Page

The thank-you page confirms the order and reassures the customer that the purchase went smoothly, thanks to its simple message and support for sustainability. The UX reinforces what they have purchased and applies more options to browse more or read about MMW values.

Reflection

WHAT WENT WELL?

- Lo-Fi wireframes were turned into a complete Hi-Fi prototype with WIX, and the structure using the 4 C's made the pages feel logical and straightforward.
- My visual identity came together significantly across all required pages.
- Sustainable storytelling is naturally incorporated into most pages in a clear layout.
- Straightforward navigation and simple flows that aligned with UX best solution for positive customer journey with MMW.

LEARNT FROM THIS PROJECT?

- UX decisions influence the entire feel of an e-commerce website, navigation is key if not good then cause frustration even as a business owner.
- Integrate sustainability messaging in most pages clearly provides transparency and supports customer journeys.
- I learnt how to create and work a whole website as i have never done this before.
- I realised the value and helpfulness WIX is and can change the clarity of a page.
- I learning how to link technical requirements like page structure and adding links and links to other pages.

WHAT ARE MY NEXT STEPS?

- Improving imagery, adding more realistic try-on content, adding proper social media links and emails, and defining all pages instead of just one (e.g., product page).
- Once the above point is complete, run user tests to gather feedback and update/change as needed.
- Using my own visuals of behind the scenes of the brand for sustainability pages and journals, etc, to show visual proof of transparency
- If I develop the site for real, I'll move into a full e-commerce setup: product tagging, payments, shipping settings, and expanding the range.
